Their famous roasted chicken delivery service is back: You can now enjoy our takeaway roast chicken with potatoes every Saturday from 11:30am. Place your orders at 0772084401

Google Review:

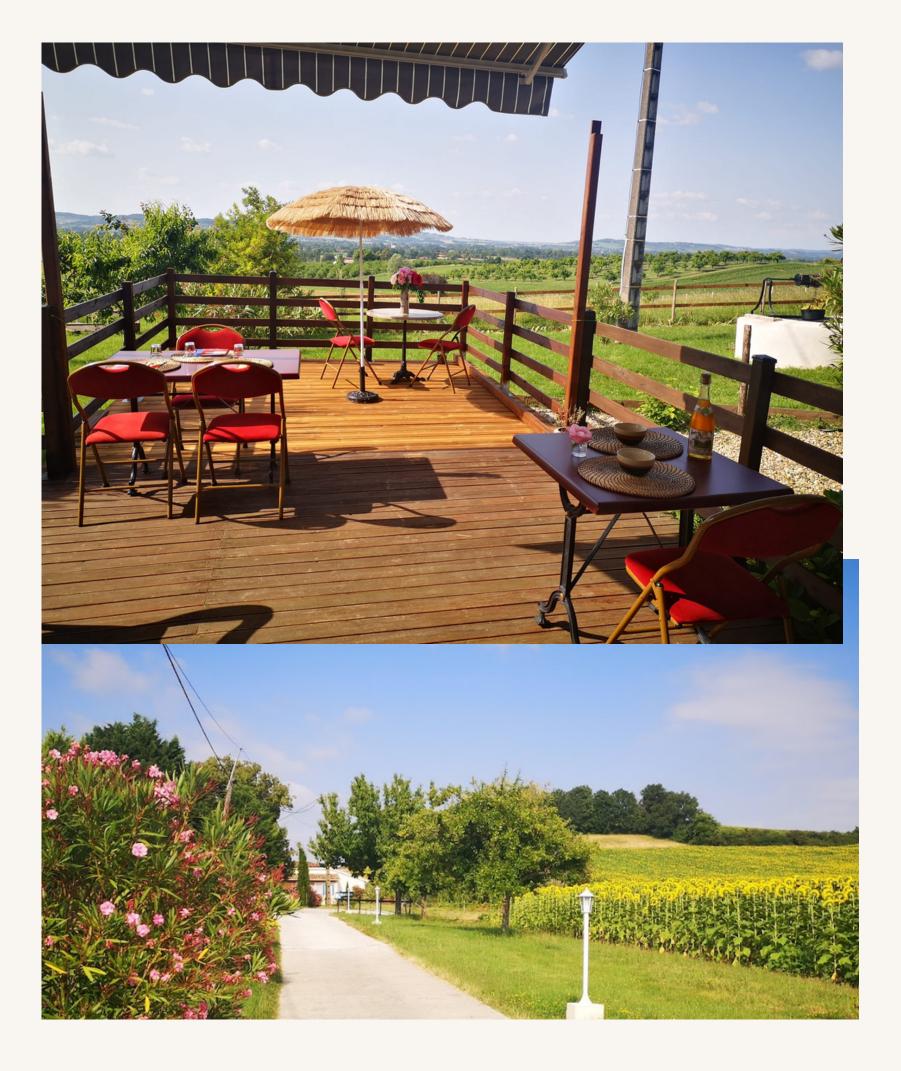

In English, there is the expression: "Dont judge the Book by the cover".. so it can say the most important thing is the interior, not the surface. so, the restaurant looks very plain from the outside. BUT we discovered that the dishes are delicious!. the pizza is great, the salad is great!

Lieu dit Bâteau, 47110 Le Temple, France

Castelmoron-sur-Lot and its castle

Nestled in a meander in the Lot Valley, the village of Castelmoron grew up around its castle as early as the 13th century. In the 16th century, the place became a major refuge for Protestant Calvinists. It conceals startling buildings, notably the Château Solar, in neo-Moorish style. Located on a wide terrace over the Lot, this now houses the town hall. Castelmoron has a much-loved port, plus a sandy beach near the campsite in the neighbouring parish of Le Temple-sur-Lot.

Pl. du Maréchal Foch, 47000 Agen, France

Cathedral of Saint-Caprais

Built in the 12th-century, the church is dedicated to Saint Caprasius. Free to visit, be sure to wander inside for the true masterpiece of this Cathedral: the ornately painted 19th-century frescoes that adorn the walls, ceilings, and altar-piece of the ecclesiastical building.

Now a UNESCO world heritage site, Agen's cathedral has been the city's cathedral since 1803 and is impressive with Gothic and Renaissance stylistic features. Also of note is that Saint-Caprais is one of the churches on the roads of France on the Way of Saint James to Santiago de Compostela.

A day trip to Agen

35 minutes drive

Somewhere on the train line between the touristic towns of Toulouse and Bordeaux, you'll find it. A place that few have heard of and even fewer have visited, Agen is the kind of city where timber-framed houses can be found in abundance and where history is never too far away. The rugby and prune capital of France can easily be explored over the course of a day. Here's a guide to the best things to do in Agen!

Place Notre-Dame-du-Bourg, 47000 Agen, France

Chapelle Notre-Dame du Bourg

Dating back to the 13th-century, this small chapel is just one of the many churches and chapels that can be found sprinkled across the city of Agen. Once the chapel of an important regional cemetery, the side of the building is home to a unique clock, while the brick build is reminiscent of Toulousain architecture.

Pl. du Dr Esquirol, 47000 Agen, France

Le Théâtre Ducourneau

Right next to Agen's town museum, the first stone of the theatre was laid in 1906 by the-then president of the Republic of France, Armand Fallières. The theatre of Agen is the first of its kind in I'Hexagon to be constructed in re-enforced concrete.

Sample the world-famous Agen Plums (Pruneaux d'Agen)

Truth be told, Agen is most famous for its prunes (Ente plums) that are actually grown in the fields and villages surrounding the city. Sometimes steeped in brandy, this local French speciality is a must-sample when in the region.

Each year, on the last weekend in August, Agen hosts 'Le Pruneau Show, Les Fête d'Agen' over three days, in which live music, sports, and plum culture are celebrated.

Le Bourg, 47150 Gavaudun, France

Chateau de Gavaudun

50 minutes drive.

Château de Gavaudun is situated in the beautiful and quiet Gavaudun Valley (on the River Lede), that runs between Lacapelle Biron (and Chateau Biron) to the north and towards Monflanquin to the south, in the north of the Lot-et-Garonne department. It is the setting and the castle donjon (keep) that is the highlight of a visit to Gavaudun. Perched astonishingly on a jutting out rocky outcrop, the castle at Gavaudun towers over the village below, and over the valley which it was built to guard over.

A day trip to Monflanquin

35 minutes drive

Listed as one of 'les plus beaux villages de France' (one of the most beautiful villages in France), Monflanquin. An ancient town with a medieval heart that's topped with a fortified bastide, other highlights of Monflanquin include heading to the local market and strolling the cobbled lanes. Medieval re-enactments take place in town during various festivals throughout the year.

Château de, 24540 Biron, France

Chateau de Biron

50 minutes drive

Labeled "Grand site of Aquitaine", the castle of Biron is the seat of one of the four baronies of Périgord. Over the years and according to events, this primitive fortress has undergone many changes. Each century has left its mark, giving a particular attraction to this exceptional architectural ensemble. Installed on a hillock, on the borders of Périgord and Agenais, it was the heart of a big seigniorial exploitation

Lieux dit Lacombe, 2979 Rte des Piles, 24750 Cornille, France Cornille Aventure

1 hour 55 minutes drive

Come and enjoy Cornille Aventure for a memorable day with family, friends or for any event. The park is located in a wooded and hilly natural setting 10 minutes from the center of Périgueux. The park offers a 10-course treetop adventure course from 3 years old, including a 10m high jump and a 130m long zip line. A landscaped 18-hole mini-golf course in synthetic green also accessible to people with reduced mobility to the delight of all. An outdoor laser game on a shaded area of 3000m2 accessible from 7 years old, no projectile, no pain, you are equipped with the latest generation equipment, light and easy to use. You will be welcomed in our park in a friendly atmosphere by our team.

Château de Fénelon 982, route de Fénelon, 24370 Sainte-Mondane, France

Château de Fénelon

1 hour 55 minutes drive

The Chateau de Fenelon is an imposing castle in the heart of Perigord Noir, the region in the south-east of the Dordogne department, in Sainte-Modane and between Sarlat and Souillac. Note that Fenelon castle is not open to visitors from November to March, and is open afternoons only in October

There are several car parks around the edge of Monflanquin so parking is not usually difficult. Wherever you park you will find that all streets quickly lead to the village centre and the central square in Monflanquin, the Place des Arcades. This square has beautifully preserved arcades around the edges and many other impressive buildings.

The square is also home to the weekly market each Thursday, as it has been since 1256! Unfortunately the original medieval market hall (as you can still see in Villereal, Monpazier and several other villages nearby) is no longer present in Monflanquin but several trees help preserve the pleasant ambiance. There are several good restaurants in Monflanquin, also mostly around this central square.

Perhaps most noteworthy and most impressive is the 'House of the Black Prince', at the top-right of the square. The Black Prince stayed here for a while during the Hundred Years War, and not surprisingly he kept the best house for himself, but all the corner houses have suitably impressive stone arches (arcades).

Just outside the square is the impressive 13th century Church of Saint-André, with an attractive stone entrance. In fact significant parts of the church are recent renovations including the nave and the chevet that were rebuilt in the 18th century and - although you wouldn't perhaps guess unless you look closely - the belltower was only added in the early 20th century. No matter, it still seems very well suited to the surrounding Monflanquin architecture...in fact I'm sorry for pointing it out to you because now you will notice it straightaway!

Continue a little way beyond the church to reach the top of the hill and far-reaching views across open countryside, extending to Chateau Biron on the distant horizon. As always in medieval villages I encourage you to explore the alleys and narrow side streets that surround the centre of Monflanquin, because it is in these backstreets that you will find many of the most authentic medieval buildings and architecture, including several traditional half-timbered houses. The streets follow a grid pattern typical of a bastide town and are connected by narrow alleys which seem unchanged with the centuries.

If you walk down the hill and across the main road you can discover a little known corner of Monflanquin, where several old houses surround an ancient washhouse. The busiest days in Monflanquin's annual calendar are the medieval days during which for a couple of days in the summer the town has a festival filling the town, with exhibitions of falconry, people dressed in 'olden days' clothes, lots of artificial blood and gore and you will stumble across lepers and beggars in the alleys. Don't miss it if you are in the region when it is on.

To learn more about the history of Monflanquin and the other bastide towns in the region you can visit the Museum of the Bastides in Monflanquin. Although the museum has quite a small number of exhibits it is interesting to have some understanding of how these towns came into being.

Drive a few kilometres south towards Villeneuve-sur-Lot, then turn around and drive back again! There are some great views of Monflanquin when approaching from this direction, especially early in the morning when the sun rises over the village.

Pl. de l'Église, 24560 Issigeac, France A day trip to Issigeac

48 minutes drive

A speck of a medieval village that finds its roots in Roman times. Particular highlights of Issigeac include heading to the local market (one of the most famous Sunday markets of the Dordogne) and soaking up the ambiance of the historic town centre.

4 Rte du Château, 24240 Monbazillac, France

Monbazillac

In between Issigeac and Bergerac is Monbazillac, the village is pleasant, if very small, and would probably go unnoticed if it wasn't for the imposing Château de Monbazillac on the edge of the village and the famous wines produced here. A listed sixteenth century building. The castel de Monbazillac, property of the Monbazillac Cellars Company since 1960, is a unique and original architectural blend of medieval defensive fortifications and Renaissance exuberance. Set in the heart of the prestigious vineyard of the same name, the Château de Monbazillac's garden terraces afford stunning views across the Dordogne valley. Fully furnished, the castel is open all year round to visitors, either travelling independently or on group tours. After visiting the Château each visitor is offered a complementary tasting of Monbazillac wine. Book here chateau-monbazillac.com

L'Authentik

1 hour drive

Among the very best duck dishes in duck-obsessed Dordogne is cromesquis d'effiloché de canard essentially, battered pulled-duck balls with spiced gravy. The young chef here, Klo, formerly of France's Top Chef, does similarly youthful things with other trad ingredients at ultra-reasonable prices (two courses £21; lauthentik-restaurant.fr).

8 Rue des Fontaines, 24100 Bergerac, France L'Imparfait

This Bergerac institution of bare stone walls and beams punctuated with modern art (spot the Niki de Saint Phalle figurines) is unable to take sole meunière off its menu because there'd be riots. The dish is big, fresh and brilliant — as is the other stand-out, beef fillet with foie gras. Then again, everything's good: Dordogne caviar, oysters, lamb, the lot — that's why it's an institution (mains from £23; imparfait.com).

1 rue Fenelon, Bergerac, France

Bistro d'en Face

Across the river from the town centre, this bistro has a fab setting and terrace, overlooking the Dordogne. Come here for razor clams, smoked pork belly with spices and hake in a coulis of pepperoni and pepper, which is about as good as fish gets. Bookings: +33553613406

1 Rue des Récollets, 24100 Bergerac, France Interprofession des Vins de Bergeracet Duras

Make for the Maison des Vins on Quai Cyrano at lunch or evening aperitif time, taste wisely among the Bergerac region's 13 appellations, order an assiette of cold cuts, river fish or veggie stuff, then take a bottle — maybe a Pécharmant red — onto the terrace overlooking the river. Settle down — life just went rosy (vins-bergeracduras.fr).

Google Review:

By pushing the door of this traditional restaurant, just a few steps from Malbeck Square, you are welcomed by a very warm and friendly staff. The bright room with contemporary decor is large enough to enjoy a good time at the table without promiscuity. Sebastien, the chef and owner of the premises, works with care for fresh local produce, adding to each dish its personal touch. The slate, changed daily, is provided to compose your menu. On entry it's a smoked salmon verrine, followed by the back of the brotted chest of leeks cream sauce. For dessert, let yourself be tempted by the chef's revisited fire. The menus of the day are offered at very affordable prices and the wine list is the perfect place for Bergerac wines. The room service is friendly and fast if necessary. Think about booking, especially the weekend, because the restaurant is very successful.

24240 Moulin de Malfourat, Bergerac

La Tour des Vents

At the top of a hill, surrounded by the Bergerac vineyards, next to the ruins of a windmill, this beautiful, opulent restaurant affords unforgettable views of the surroundings. Chef Damien Fagette promotes the local produce of the Périgord by working with Blonde d'Aquitaine beef, foie gras and free-range Périgord chicken. Prepared with great care and skill, his contemporary cuisine is a succulent alliance of fine ingredients, accurate cooking and well-defined flavours. Grilled squid, shallot with red wine and chorizo churros; variations on lamb (roasted saddle, confit shoulder rissole and leg marinated kebab-style); warm Grand Marnier soufflé. A wonderful experience.

Quai Cyrano, Culture, Wine and Tourism

In the Quai Cyrano, you'll find the tourist office, the wine house, and the entrance to the Cloister of Recoletos.

On the ground floor, at street level, is the tourist office of the "Pays de Bergerac" (city of Bergerac and surrounding villages). Here you will find information for your visit.

In the map, "The Steps of Cyrano." you will find different walking itineraries, which will take you through the most beautiful places of Bergerac. There are 3 tours, and it is pretty well explained.

Cloister of Recoletos

The cloister was built in 1630, where Franciscan monks lived until the French Revolution. At that time, the Catholic chapel was replaced by a Protestant church.

During the summer, there are live music events.

24100 Bergerac, France

Place de la Mirpe

Place de la Mirpe is one of Bergerac's most beautiful and picturesque squares. This is where the grain market was made, and you will find beautiful halftimbered houses and a 1977 statue of Cyrano by a sculptor from the city, Jean Varoqueau.

24100 Bergerac, France

Old Town

On the right bank of the Dordogne, Bergerac's medieval quarter is an angular jumble of streets sloping down to the river.

You'll adore the half-timbered houses, like Maison Gaudra on Rue des Fontaines dating from the 1300s.

Down Rue Gaudra is "Le Cadeau", a stream that once powered the city's seven water mills and even today runs a disguised little hydroelectric plant on Rue des Fontaines.

Place Pélissière gets its name from the skin and hide traders that used to work on the square and is where you can see the Church of Saint-Jacques, and look up at the wooden perch made for the bellringers.

14 Quai Salvette, 24100 Bergerac, France

Boat Ride

In the 19th century wine went down river to the port of Bordeaux on flat-bottomed wooden boats. Reproductions of these host gentle 50-minute river cruises, during which you can listen to the commentary, look for herons and cranes or slip into a siesta (£10; gabarresdebergerac.fr). Should you want something more vigorous, hire bikes — electric or classic — from the tourist office and explore the Dordogne riverbank (pays-bergerac-tourisme.com).

Fortified House of Reignac

Listed as a historical monument, this extraordinary "cliff-castle" is undoubtedly the most secret, the most unusual and the most mysterious in Périgord. Some even say it is haunted...

Preserved in exceptional condition since the 14th century and fully furnished with period furniture, the Fortified House of Reignac is in France the only monument of this troglodyte type to have come down to us completely intact.

Of rare historical interest, this noble lair is infinitely larger than one might suspect from the outside. Behind the facade are hidden impressive underground and airy rooms: Great Hall of Honor, weapons room, Hall of the Great Men, kitchen, chapel, bedrooms, dungeon ...

At the end of the visit, an internationally renowned exhibition on the theme of "torture in the Middle Ages" is offered to you at no extra cost.

Wine Tasting

1 hour and 44 minutes drive

There is not just one museum dedicated entirely to wine in Bordeaux, but two. While everyone talks about the newer, chic, and interactive Cité du Vin, there's also a second wine museum which is set up in a more traditional manner. For a full guide to the history of Bordeaux wines and appellations, check out this guide to Bordeaux wines.

The Musée du Vin et du Négoce de Bordeaux can be found in the historic Chartrons district of the city and costs €10 to enter. Housed within the former wine cellars of the wine merchant for Louis XV, the wine museum comes complete with a complimentary wine tasting at the end of your visit.

1 Cours du XXX Juillet, Bordeaux-Centre, 33000

La Maison du Vin de Bordeaux

'Bordeaux's House of Wine' is the centre for the CIVB, the Bordeaux Wine Trade Council and the quintessential wine bar 'Bar á Vin'.

You can't miss the 18th century building shaped like a ship's prow just across from the Bordeaux Tourist Office not far from the main tram stop 'Quinconces' by the Esplanade des Quinconces.

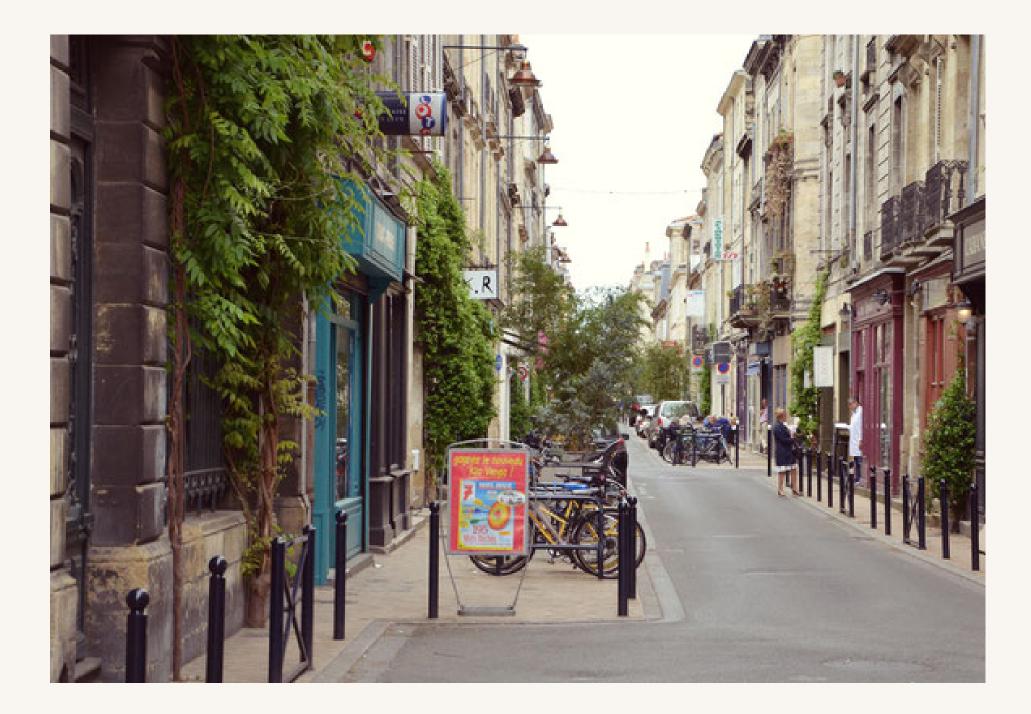

'Bar á Vin' is also a great break destination in a hectic day and an opportunity to relax in ultra comfort surroundings nibbling from a selection of cheeses and cured meat delectables. It's one of the few wine bars open all day.

51 Rue Notre Dame, 33000 Bordeaux, France

Chartrons district

One of the more charming and intimate areas of Bordeaux is the Chartrons district, an area characterised by its cobbled lanes and historic homes. Highlights of the area include the Chartrons Temple, Notre Dame Street, and the little eateries of Les Halles des Chartrons.

Pl. Pey Berland, 33000 Bordeaux, France

Bordeaux Cathedral

Easily one of the most beautiful cathedrals in France, that of Bordeaux is well worth visiting during any trip to the Southern French city. The 11th-century Bordeaux Cathedral is officially known as the Primatial Cathedral of St Andrew of Bordeaux and is free to wander around

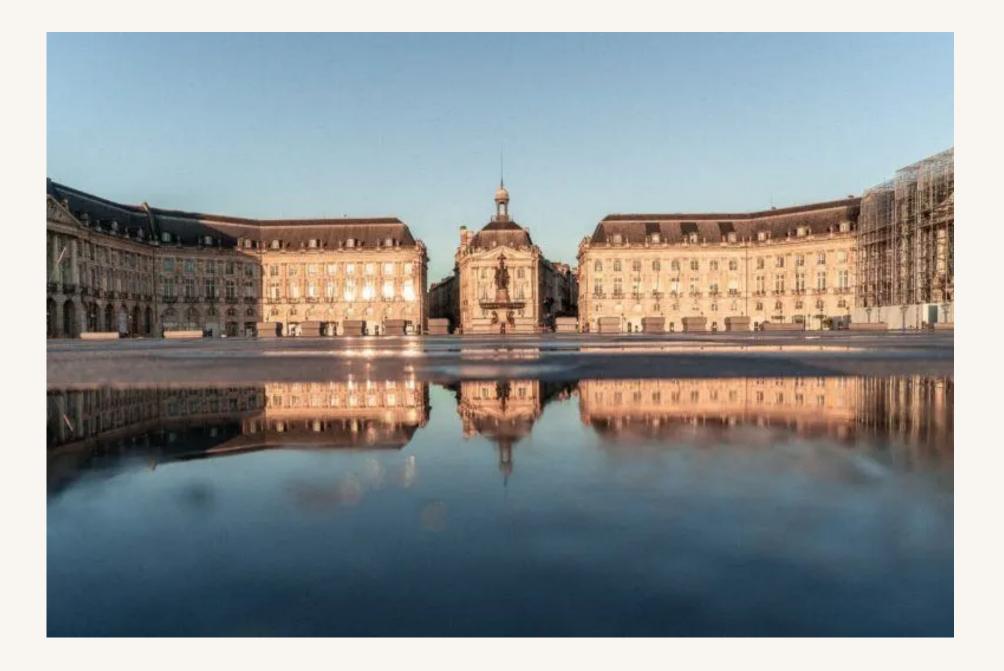

Pl. de la Bourse, 33000 Bordeaux, France

Miroir d'Eau

Located on Place de la Bourse, located along the River Garonne, the Miroir d'Eau is the largest reflective pool in the world. Perfectly reflecting the Place, the water feature spans 3450 metres squared and was put in place in 2006.

Created from granite slabs, the best time to see the Miroir d'Eau is at sunset when candy colours dance across the sky, or at night when the lights of the city are perfectly reflected.

Pl. Pey Berland, 33000 Bordeaux, France

Pey Berland Tower

The Pey Berland Tower is one of the city's most iconic landmarks.

The 15th-century bell tower was built separately from the Saint-André Cathedral to provide the cathedral with a large bell without threatening its structure, and towers at 50 meters high. The tower is built in the Flamboyant Gothic style and was named after Archbishop Pey-Berland, who commissioned its construction.

At the top of the tower is a golden statue of the Virgin with infant Christ, officially called the Notre Dame d'Aquitaine.

8 rue de la Devise, Bordeaux, 33000

Quartier Saint Pierre

One of the oldest in Bordeaux, the Saint-Pierre district dates back to the 12th century. It is the best area to discover historic monuments, the 18thcentury architecture and enjoy a meal or a drink at a local bar. The area is extremely popular with locals for aperitives, dining, and night outings.

Mostly composed of 18th and 19th-century buildings, the Saint-Pierre district stretches between the Garonne river and rue Saint Catherine, and between Cours Alsace et Lorraine and rue du Chapeau Rouge.

33000 Bordeaux, France

Rue Sainte-Catherine

It's a shopaholic's dream: the longest pedestrian street in France at nearly a mile long, and lined with stores on both sides. The big French brand names and fashion chains are clustered on the north end, gradually evolving into the cheap, quirky and cheerful shopping on the south end. It's a mad house during the February and July sales — stands of goods at near giveaway prices are set up all along the street. Bars and restaurants along the way provide fuel when you begin to flag.

10 Pl. de la Bourse, 33000 Bordeaux, France

L'Observatoire du Gabriel

"A premium location depicts this establishment in the central edifice of Bordeaux' iconic Place de la Bourse, facing the water mirror. Its exquisite 18C sitting rooms have been treated to a revamp, providing the ideal setting to sample the cuisine of chef Alexandre Baumard (Logis de la Cadène, Saint-Émilion). The stonking 600-bin wine list errs between Bordeaux and Burgundy.

35 Rue du Cancera, 33000 Bordeaux

Soif

With its selection of good, natural wine, small plates and excellent vibes, Soif is not to be missed. This caves à manger (a French term for a wine bar serving food) serves simple, seasonal dishes on cute grandma-chic plates. Food is based on the morning market's spoils, but signatures include pork belly and hazelnut pâté en croute, calf's head ravigote with oysters, Manex pork rillettes, and pot-au-feu terrine with foie gras medallion. The 350-strong wine list offers a mix of by-the-glass and by-the-bottle delights sourced from artisanal vintners in France and further afield. Soif is a gem in the Saint-Pierre district's crown.

134 Quai de Bacalan, 33300 Bordeaux

Le 7

Perched on the seventh floor of the Cité du Vin, the aptly-named Le 7 has floor-to-ceiling windows that offer spectacular views over the city and the Garonne river. Chef Djordje Ercevic delivers bistronomy wonders that blend local produce with far-flung flavours. Try the beef carpaccio, chickpea hummus and oyster tartare, or tuck into crispy veal sweetbreads with foaming butter, spring onions, smoked bacon and Bordelaise sauce. Pastry chef Marilou Tamarelle is sure to wow on the dessert front. Naturally, wines here are second to none, with 500 types from over 50 countries. Look out for the 25 icons of the region, including Château Margaux and Cheval Blanc.

Opened in 2017 in front of the Cité du Vin wine museum, Halles de Bacalan has become a hotspot for Bordeaux foodies. Bringing together over twenty farmers, artisanal traders and regional chefs in a giant hall, this is a food court with a difference. From Tuesday to Sunday, stock up on goodies for at-home feasting, or pause for aperitifs and bites from a selection of stalls – truffle pasta, grilled squid, pizza and chocolate mousse. Although dishes will taste just as good indoors, eating on the market's terrace – which looks out across the water and is the biggest in Bordeaux – is an unbeatable experience.

Monolithic Church of Saint-Emilion

1 hour and 40 minutes drive

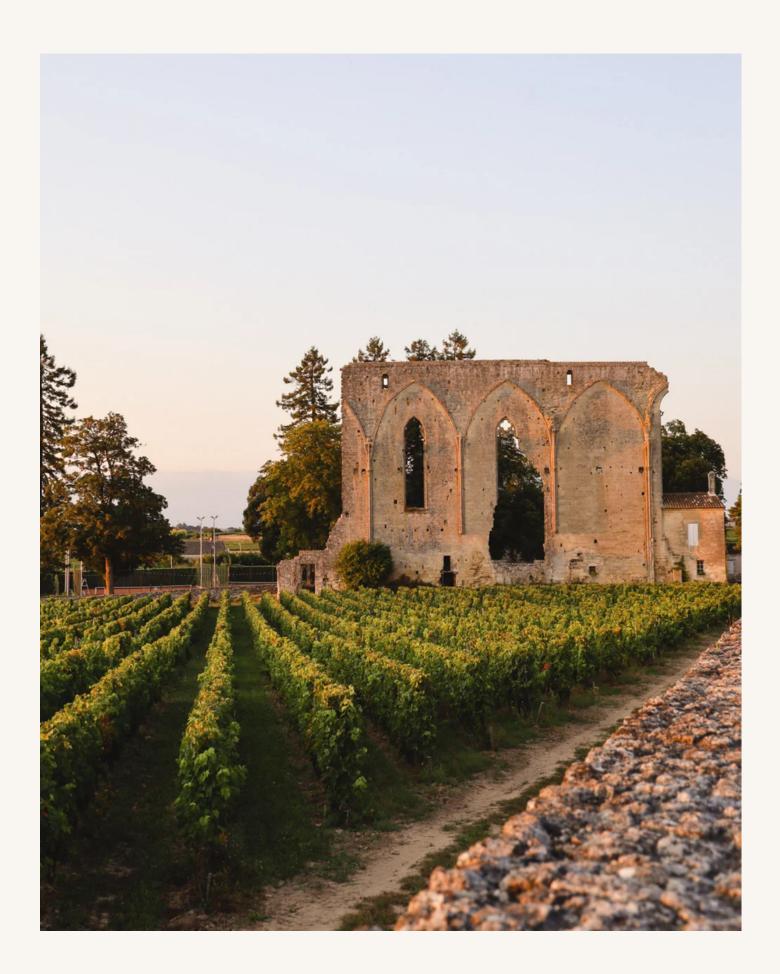

The largest monolithic church in Europe sits right in the middle of Saint Émilion. From the neighboring square with several restaurants, you can see the three arched windows that are the outside of the church. But, this hardly does the structure justice. You have to take a guided tour to see inside the underground church that was carved in the 12th century. On the tour, you'll also visit the hermitage of Saint Émilion and learn about the monk who founded the town. The tour also covers the catacombs and Trinity Chapel with restored paintings.

Les Grandes Murailles

This section of wall is the elegant remains of an imposing Dominican convent built in the thirteenth century and which included a church, a cloister, a chapter house and a bell tower.

Château Coutet, 33720 Barsac, France

Château Coutet

Château Coutet Barsac, one of the oldest Sauternes producing vineyards and a Premier Cru Classé from the 1855 Classification of Sauternes, is one of the best places to understand this complex sweet wine. With a tasting workshop that introduces each of the grape varietals that can make up a Sauternes wine separately, you'll come away with a deep understanding and appreciation for the complexity of Sauternes.

Château Valandraud

The history of Château Valandraud dates back to 1989 when Jean-Luc Thunevin and Murielle Andraud decided to acquire a small plot of 0.6 hectares in the Saint-Emilion valley, not far from the Châteaux Pavie-Macquin and La Clotte. The name Valandraud is a subtle blend of a geographical location (Val Valley of Fongabau) and a sentimental connection. Indeed, "Andraud", the surname of Murielle appears on the registers of Saint-Emilion as early as 1459. By the gradual purchase of neighboring parcels, the area now has 8.88 hectares. In 1991, Château Valandraud's first vintage was marketed and marked the beginning of a new era for the Thunevin family, following their success as a merchant.

Place des Créneaux Le Doyenné, 33330 Saint-Émilion, France Lookout point

This incredible look out point in Saint Émilion can't be missed. It requires zero planning, no tour and it's absolutely free.

Starting at the tourism office, walk out to the foot of bell tower which is also the roof top of the underground church.

3 Pl. du Marché au Bois, 33330 Saint-Émilion, France

Logis de la Cadene

estled inside a small pedestrianised courtyard in the centre of Saint-Émilion, the Logis de la Cadène wins over diners with charming service throughout that never falters and enhances the experience here. Once installed in a comfortable armchair in the classic, elegant dining room (exposed stonework, old parquet flooring), let the culinary show begin. The cuisine showcases the best of the local terroir in accomplished and inventive dishes such as the lamb served in different ways (the rack is served pink and comes with a reduced carcass jus, while the shoulder is stuffed with tiny girolle mushrooms from the Médoc). These culinary delights are accompanied by astutely selected wines, with over 900 labels on the wine list.

11 Rue du Clocher, 33330 Saint-Émilion, France

L'Envers de Decors

In the heart of this iconic wine village, a few steps from the bell tower, the picturesque red façade of this bistro catches the eye. Inside lies an elegant vintage décor with a zinc counter and leather bench seating. The menu runs the gamut of classic French staples from calf's liver to rum baba. Fine selection of reasonably priced wines.

A family-run restaurant founded in 1986, located in the heart of the village, where you can enjoy lunch in one of the three dining rooms with panoramic views.

Le Bourg d'Hautefort, 24390 Hautefort, France

Château de Hautefort

2 hours and 30 minutes drive

Located on a rocky spur, the Hautefort Castle is an old medieval fortress transformed in the 17th century by the marquis of the name into a pleasure dwelling. Embellished in particular by the addition in the 19th century of a French garden and a landscaped park, it is a unique site in the Périgord which combines the splendour of nature and the majesty of architecture with a culture of refinement inherited and transmitted over time. This place steeped in history, preserved and restored by its various owners for over a millennium, can still be visited today. It is the fruit of a family's strong commitment to one value: beauty.
